NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF FM BROADCASTERS

The National Association of FM Broadcasters was organized in September, 1959, to foster and promote the successful development of frequency modulation broadcasting. Its activities are primarily concerned with the special needs of the FM broadcaster which cannot be met by the National Association of Broadcasters and, therefore, it is not a substitute for the NAB. Specifically, the purposes and objectives of the National Association of FM Broadcasters are to:

1. Promote, in the public interest, the broadest possible use of the FM spectrum as an effective means of mass communication.

2. Promote the purchase of FM broadcast time by national advertisers and agencies.

3. Promote the sale of FM receivers and their increased usage.

4. Promote the use of both qualitative and quantitative audience measurements by responsible research firms.

5. Promote the sale of local advertising on FM.

6. Assist in central FM public relations, publicity and advertising.

7. Encourage the maximum usage of sub channels by FM stations.

8. Report to members on all FM program sources such as taped syndication, suitable script and continuity services.

9. Foster local and regional FMB associations.

10. Maintain suitable liaison and contact with and work through and with the FM Committee of the NAB in those spheres of association work handled by them.

Any active licensee of an FM station, or the holder of a valid construction permit for the construction of an FM station, is eligible for membership in the Association. In addition, persons utilizing the services provided by an FM station may be members.

In the less than two years of its existence, the Association has grown from a small nucleus of stations to an organization with more than 200 members.

To properly service its growing membership, the Association maintains a Washington, D. C., office located in the Munsey Building, 1329 E Street, N. W. This office, which is in charge of the Association's Executive Secretary, Edward F. Kenehan, publishes the Association's Monthly Newsletter to members, acts as a clearing house for all information and membership news, and is available to the members of the Association, along with stenographic and other general clerical assistance, when they are in Washington. The Association has also retained the Washington law firm of Spearman and Roberson to act as its legal counsel.
